TUESDAY EVENING, DEC. 28.

CRIMINAL QUACKERY .- A terrible case of quackery has just been exposed in New York in the treatment of a Mrs. Eliza Conway. Mrs. Conway had been suffering from a cancer, which a number of respectable physicians pronounced incurable. A quack of the name of Linquist, styling himself doctor, who professed to make a speciality of such cases, was called in by the husband, and at once proposed to cure the wife for $50. Under the treatment of this imposter the poor woman endured the most terrible agony, gradually sinking under his horrible practice until death came to her relief. Upon being examined before the coroner's jury this doctor (?) testified that he had never studied medicine; had been bred a farmer, and knew nothing at all about cancer or any other disease. His treatment consisted in the application of a plaster or salve, by which he claimed to "draw the cancer out." He did not even know the names of the herbs used, and was totally unacquainted either with their use or virtues. Such cases as this are only too common among us; and yet so fond are the general public of being gulled that the rogues very often flourish where the regular practitioner is unable to earn his salt.
